THE annual Hackney Carnival Awards took place last month to celebrate the contribution that groups made to the phenomenal success of the day. Paracarnival (pictured) won the 'Judge's Choice Award', acting under the banner of 'total inclusion for absolutely everyone'. The group created a spectacular float, presenting the theme of kings and queens. Cllr Guy Nicholson, Cabinet Member with responsibility for the Arts & Culture, who presented the awards on 25 October, said: "Hackney Carnival is an amazing testament to our diverse community and we are proud to celebrate the people who make it happen." See page 5 for the full list of winners.

THANK EU HACKNEY

MORE than 100 people attended an event in Hackney last month for EU citizens to learn about their rights around Brexit.

Organised by the EU embassies and the European Commission, they were given up-to-date legal information about the Draft Withdrawal Agreement and were able to ask questions of an expert immigration lawyer.

Queries covered a range of topics, including proof of continuous residency in the UK, rights of family members working in the UK, qualifying for UK settled status and obtaining permanent residency.

About 15 per cent of Hackney residents – 41,500 people – are from other EU countries.

Mayor of Hackney, Philip

Glanville, who addressed the full room at Hackney House, Shoreditch, said: "I'm very honoured that Hackney's been chosen to host this. We're a borough known across the world for our fantastic diversity and vibrancy, something many of you are part of.

"European citizens make an enormous contribution to the civic and cultural life of this borough. You're as much a part of Hackney and London as anyone else.

"You've brought a huge array of skills, expertise and creativity to this borough, and innovation that's been at the very heart of the economic success we see around us. You are hugely valued and forever welcome in Hackney and London."

The free event, on 29 October, was live-streamed on Facebook and has so far been viewed by 35,000 people. Visit: www.facebook.com/ECinUK

THE Council is calling on the Government to go further with its proposed scheme to compensate members of the Windrush generation, and is urging people to make sure they have their say.

Following the implementation of the Immigration Act 2014, many British citizens who had travelled to the UK from Commonwealth countries in the Caribbean and elsewhere were wrongly classified as illegal immigrants. They were denied access to public services, and the right to live and work in the UK, and some were deported.

The Government is now proposing to compensate those affected and has launched a consultation

“I’d urge everyone who’s a member of the Windrush Generation... to make their voices heard” outlining how its scheme would work, which closes on 16 November.

The Council’s response claims the current scheme is: “An inadequate response to the scale of suffering that the misapplication of ‘hostile environment’ policies has created.”

It believes there should be no maximum compensation amount, confidentiality agreements or time limits.

The Council further believes that the scheme should be easier to engage with and understand, and should compensate for emotional distress. There should not be a one size fits all approach to how claims are judged; compensation should be tax free and reflect the individual circumstances; and there should be free legal advice.

Cllr Carole Williams, Cabinet Member for Employment, Skills and Human Resources, said: “Hackney’s Windrush generation and their children have, and continue to, contribute a huge amount, and are at the heart of the borough’s culture. It’s appalling that these valued members of society have been treated as second class citizens by this Government.

“While we welcome the idea of a compensation scheme, the Government now needs to do the right thing and ensure it’s fit for purpose, rather than the current set of inadequate box-ticking half-measures it’s currently proposing.

“I’d urge everyone who’s a member of the Windrush Generation, or who knows someone who has been affected by the Government’s policies, to make their voices heard.”

Have your say at the annual Hackney Mayor’s Question Time

DO you have any questions that you’d like to ask the Mayor of Hackney?

Residents and businesses are being invited to the second annual Hackney Mayor’s Question Time to ask Mayor Philip Glanville about any issues that matter to them, as well as offer their ideas for the borough.

Chairing the event is Dr Melissa Butcher, resident and lecturer at Birkbeck University, where she researches how cities change and the impact this has on communities.

Mayor Glanville said: “These now annual events are an opportunity to hear from people from across Hackney’s diverse communities about the issues which matter most to them, whether it be housing, crime, schools and transport; jobs, high streets, the environment; or health, social care and cohesion.

“There’s been a lot of change in Hackney and there will be much more to come in the years ahead.

We face many challenges, but I know there’s a huge amount of passion in our borough about how we can keep it a great place to live for everyone.”

The free event will take place at Hackney Town Hall on 26 November, from 7 to 9pm.

TRADERS at Ridley Road Shopping Village will continue selling their wares into the new year, after the owner of the building agreed to let them stay for at least another six months.

The indoor market's management company had given traders just two weeks' notice of their intention to close.

The market had been due to close at the end of the year, as the management company handed back the lease to allow the building to be renovated into new retail units, workspace and flats.

However, the management company decided to speed this up after being given a community protection notice by the police, ordering them to address anti-social behaviour and safety issues.

The Mayor of Hackney, Philip Glanville, wrote to the owners, urging them to give the traders more time.

Mayor Glanville and Cabinet Member for Planning, Business and Investment, Cllr Guy Nicholson, met with representatives from Rainbow Properties, the owners of Ridley Road Shopping Village, on 29 October.

Mayor Glanville said: "At the meeting we made clear our expectations that the renovation of the Shopping Village should benefit traders and residents, and we look forward to them submitting a revised planning application.

Mohamed Lamine Barry, one of the traders at the indoor market in Ridley Road

"While this work continues, Rainbow Properties have confirmed that traders will be able to stay well into next year, with the potential to secure a longer term lease in the renovated building.

"Ridley Road Shopping Village is an important part of not only the wider market but Dalston itself.

"We've already started a conversation with the Dalston community about how we can manage the changes taking place – with pledges to champion existing businesses, protect Ridley Road Market and secure affordable workspace, especially in existing and emerging

"The threatened closure of Ridley Road Shopping Village shows why we need to hear the voices and views of everyone who lives, works and visits Dalston so that we can continue developing a plan that puts the local community's priorities first."

Mohamed Lamine Barry has been trading at the Shopping Village since 2009. He's now looking forward to a busy Christmas period and hopes the news will bring more shoppers to the market.

Mohamed said: "I would encourage people to come down and have a look at what we've got."

Pick up energy saving advice

RESIDENTS can pick up energy saving advice and find out more about how they can pursue a more environmentally sustainable lifestyle at Hackney's second annual Sustainability Day, on 17 November.

Visitors to this year's event, which will feature over 30 organisations, can get advice on topics such as lowering utility bills, recycling and growing their own food.

The day will also feature a seminar, with discussions about what the Council is doing to help tackle the environmental challenges faced by the planet.

There will also be free low energy light bulbs, free refreshments and activities for families, including face painting, a smoothie bike, and a visit from a giant bumblebee. Sustainability Day takes place at Hackney Town Hall Square on 17 November, from 11am to 4pm.

To sign up for the seminar, and find out more about saving energy, visit: www.hackney.gov.uk/save-energy; or call: 020 8356 8195.

Pledge to raise awareness of uncommon cancers

HACKNEY is thought to be the first council in the country to pass a motion pledging to raise awareness of, and support training and research into, rare and uncommon cancers.

A cancer is considered rare if fewer than six in 100,000 people are diagnosed with it each year. However, there are many types of rare and uncommon cancers, and 46 per cent of diagnoses are in this category.

On average, 22 people in Hackney are diagnosed with Neuroendocrine Tumours (NETs) – or rare cancers – each year.

The motion was passed in time for the Council to join others in marking International NET Cancer Day on 10 November.

Cllr Rebecca Rennison, who proposed the motion, said: "This is the start of a programme of work that will contribute to the Council's efforts to raise awareness and improve diagnosis, treatment and outcomes for people living with rare and less common cancers in Hackney."

For more information about the NET Patient Foundation, visit: www.netpatientfoundation.org

The motion commits the Council to:

- Raise awareness of NET cancers among decision makers, health professionals and the public on 10 Nov each year
- Campaign with Hackney GPs and the NHS Trust to work toward improving an understanding of this disease among medical professionals, contributing to reduce delays in diagnosis
- Work toward ensuring that the inclusion of rare and less common cancers in the Cancer Strategy for England is reflected in Hackney's public health strategy
- Alongside other councils, to explore a London-wide strategy to increase awareness of NETs and other less common cancers
- Recognise living with cancer is a long-term condition and work with Hackney's partners to ensure that no one has to face cancer alone.

TRANSPORT for London (TfL) has unveiled plans to overhaul the Stoke Newington gyratory, aiming to transform the car-dominated one-way system into a place for people to walk, cycle and use public transport.

Proposals include a new segregated northbound cycle track, southbound bus and cycle access along Stoke Newington High Street and new traffic-free public spaces to meet and relax.

Cllr Feryal Demirci, Deputy Mayor of Hackney, said: "We've been working with residents and TfL for a number of years on plans to remove the car-dominated Stoke Newington one-way system.

"This is a long-awaited proposal and we are delighted our residents can finally have their say on plans to make the Stoke Newington area more pleasant and healthier for everyone."

The consultation will be open until 30 November. Residents and visitors can respond by visiting: consultations.tfl.gov.uk/roads/stoke-newington-gyratory or emailing: consultations@tfl.gov.uk

Residents and visitors can also offer feedback at a drop-in session on 10 November at The Old Fire Station, N16 7NX, between 11.30am-2pm.

Fresh spin on gyratory

The proposals include:

- New traffic-free public spaces to meet, play and relax
- Three new pedestrian crossings making streets in the area easier and safer to cross
- A new 20mph speed limit, raised junction and crossings to slow traffic speed and reduce road danger
- A new segregated northbound cycle track, southbound bus and cycle access along Stoke Newington High Street
- A raised carriageway with coloured surface between Brooke Road and Stoke Newington Church Street to reduce traffic dominance
- Improved public transport interchange through two-way bus operation – making it easier to access southbound bus services – and simplifying bus stops
- Limiting vehicles at the junctions of Tyssen, Hollar and Batley Roads and the High Street to reduce rat-running on residential streets providing three new pocket parks, creating a more welcoming retail environment.

News in brief

Support railway arches tenants, Council tells new landlords

THE NEW landlords of railway arches in Hackney are being urged to support the small businesses within by the Council. Network Rail last month agreed to sell the management of 5,300 properties to Telereal Trillium and Blackstone Property Partners for £1.46 billion.

There was already concern among Network Rail tenants in Hackney because of steep rent increases over the past two years. The Council had repeatedly requested they take a more collaborative approach, and stressed concerns over the mass sell-off to the private sector. Telereal Trillium and Blackstone – which manages 182 arches in Hackney – says it will take a 'tenants first' approach.

Mayor of Hackney, Philip Glanville, has met with the Greater London Authority, Tower Hamlets Council, campaign group Guardians of the Arches and local MP Meg Hillier to discuss the issue.

He has also written to the new owners urging that they deliver on their promise, and "help independent business thrive."

Revised plans for Bishopsgate Goodsyrd in Shoreditch

A PUBLIC consultation is being launched on the new proposals to redevelop the Bishopsgate Goodsyrd site in Shoreditch.

Developers Hammerson and Ballymore submitted an application in 2015 which would have seen the 11-acre site become home to a series of large, primarily residential, towers, the tallest of which would have been 47 storeys. The Council, alongside residents, businesses and community groups, campaigned against the proposals, arguing they would have had too great an impact on the area. Tower Hamlets Council was also against it.

The revised plans have lower buildings and an increased focus on workspace, retail and hospitality. There will also be a new street, footpaths and public spaces.

For more information, see advert on page 8, or visit: consultation.thegoodsyrdlondon.co.uk

Social enterprise conference

A CONFERENCE is being held to celebrate, and offer support and guidance to, Hackney's social enterprises. The borough was awarded Social Enterprise Place status last year by Social Enterprise UK, in recognition of its many social value-led businesses and commitment to supporting the growth of new enterprises.

The conference, on 15 November, will see the launch of 'A Social Enterprise Manifesto for Hackney', as well as talks, panel discussions and workshops. It will take place at Hackney House, Shoreditch. For more info, and to book tickets, visit: is.gd/MKbWIG

Protecting Hackney Wick Woodland

A CONSULTATION has been launched by the Council to protect Hackney Wick Woodland from environmental damage and limit the disturbance caused by loud music and antisocial behaviour.

The proposals are aimed at protecting Wick Woodland from the damage that has resulted from illegal raves in the area over the past few years.

This has included fly-tipping, fire damage and uprooting of trees and plants in the woods.

The Council, with the support of the police, is therefore proposing to introduce a Public Space Protection Order (PSPO), which would enable enforcement officers to issue on-the-spot fines to those organising and attending raves and causing antisocial behaviour in the area.

The proposed PSPO would apply only to the Wick Woodland area, which is bordered by the A12, the B112 and the River Lee Navigation.

Residents can have their say at: consultation.hackney.gov.uk; or by calling: 020 8356 4470 to request a paper copy of the consultation.

The consultation closes on 5 December.

FOLLOWING the biggest Hackney Carnival to date, over 100 people who made the event one to remember gathered at Shoreditch Town Hall last month to celebrate the winners of the annual Hackney Carnival Awards.

The host for the night, which took place on 25 October, was the energetic Pax Nindi, Hackney Carnival's Creative Director, and internationally recognised carnival expert.

This year's Hackney Carnival had a record-breaking 60,000 attendees, double the amount from last year, with a festival atmosphere taking place across the whole borough. This atmosphere was kept up at the awards ceremony, with many local groups in attendance.

The awards guests were entertained throughout the event by performances from Tropical Isles, Chanel Brown, Gahu Dramatic Arts, Yaram Arts, Scrappy, Ata Kak and D Alberto.

Jun Mo Generation, a carnival group representing Chinese culture, won 'Best Newcomer' for their animated performance, complete with dragon and kite dancers.

Local carnival group Tropical Isles retained their 'Carnival Band of the Year' title and they also won 'Best Theme Interpretation' due to their amazing costume designs.

Stephanie Antoine, lead choreographer, said: "To take part in Hackney Carnival and be awarded with Best Theme Interpretation for 'The Colour Purple' (the name of their theme) and Best Band Of The Year is an honour. We aspire to achieve.

"Our aim is to showcase our talent by telling a story through dance, costume and culture bringing all walks of life together under one umbrella. Tropical Isles is extremely happy for the awards and we will always continue to work at our best with the support of others."

Paracarnival won the highly rated 'Judge's Choice Award' this year, and also won second prize for 'Carnival Band of the Year'. The group created a spectacular float for this year's parade, presenting the theme of kings and queens.

By Harriet Worsley

WHEN the Stoke Newington reservoirs opened in 1830 they transformed London.

Providing a supply of fresh, clean water, and restricting the spread of waterborne diseases like cholera, they enabled the capital's population to grow to over 6.6million by the mid-1980s.

By this time, however, Londoners needed more water than the New River and its reservoirs could provide. The historic site was retired and Thames Water announced its plans to fill the reservoirs in and build on top of them.

"For those who live near and around the Stoke Newington reservoirs, it is hard to imagine life without the bucolic views, bobbing sailboats, and thriving nature," writes Emma Millar, author of 'How We Saved the Reservoirs', which was published last month.

"But, this one-of-a-kind site was once almost lost completely, buried under concrete in favour of housing development and a shopping centre."

The local community, however, had other ideas. And so began a 10-year battle to save this unique green space covering 11 hectares of water, and providing a vital urban habitat to myriad species of birds, waterfowl, bats and amphibians.

"The campaign story is a true 'David and Goliath' tale," says Emma. Its power was due, in no small part, to the community in Woodberry Down.

She continues: "It was a diverse community from the beginning. Originally home to east London victims of the Blitz, Irish and Jewish communities, then in the 1960s, people of Caribbean heritage, followed in the 1970s by Turkish and Kurdish communities."

Conceived after the Second World War as a visionary self-sufficient community, by the 1980s it had fallen into disrepair. However, a community spirit still lived on.

Emma writes: "It is unsurprising that when Thames Water announced plans to sell the reservoirs for development, the community responded in force. The residents of both Woodberry Down and its neighbours were determined that the reservoirs, New River, and filter beds would not be let go without a fight."

“It's a source of solace. If you are deprived of the natural world, you're missing a very important element of your life” remembers: "The thing that hit me... was the fact that here's the New River, such a historic piece of local and social history that had saved thousands of lives by [bringing] fresh water into the city, and it [would be] completely disregarded.

"It was just going to be swept away, built on and sold off."

The campaigners demonstrated, lobbied and petitioned. Newspapers, badges, a video and more were produced. They worked with Hackney Council and attracted the support of local MPs Diane Abbott and Jeremy Corbyn.

In 1991, the group launched its own local consultation to gain a true perspective of what the community wanted.

Emma writes: "They successfully gathered 602 completed paper questionnaires, and assimilated and analysed the results. Even today, such a project would constitute a full-time job for a team of people. Instead, it was completed by a group of volunteers alongside their work and family responsibilities."

Overall, the report found that: "People want their reservoirs and their filter beds kept, so far as possible, as they are. But they also want changes.

"They want access to the site, which has been denied them for far too long, and they want the facilities that such a large body of water naturally suggests to them – swimming, boating, and angling."

After a decade of tireless campaigning, they succeeded. And in 2016, Sir David Attenborough opened the Woodberry Wetlands on the site of the East Reservoir and run by the London Wildlife Trust.

"Connection with the natural world is very important to us all," he said. "It's a source of beauty, a source of excitement, it's a source of solace. If you're deprived of the natural world, you're missing a very important element of your life."

Hackney can now be sure of this solace, thanks to the efforts of a small community with a big idea.

In 2004, the campaign was formally dissolved, and the remaining funds were donated to the London Wildlife Trust and Friends of Hackney Archives.

By Chloe Govan

SINGER and songwriter Louise Gabrielle Bobb – known as pop star Gabrielle – began her musical journey in a terraced house in Hackney.

She reveals: “I’m an 1980s kid, so for me, the nostalgia of Madonna, Duran Duran, Spandau Ballet and Michael Jackson – that was my era. Growing up, I was like a sponge who just absorbed everything.”

As a young girl she aspired to be a singer, but classmates underestimated her. On leaving school, her notepad was scrawled full of messages with jokes such as ‘See you on Top of the Pops – ha ha ha!’

Her trademark eye patch – due to the muscle condition ptosis, when the upper eyelid droops – did not stop the Hackney-born singer conquering the charts and silencing her childhood tormentors.

Gabrielle recalls of her younger years: “No-one expected to see me on Top of the Pops. I had a lazy eyelid. I wasn’t that traditional looking girl that anyone could imagine would be on TV. I was an east London girl. A working class black female. I definitely didn’t look like I was ever going to be in the industry.”

“I came on the scene, had an eye-patch with short-finger waved hair that covered it, and I never fitted the mould of what people saw a female singer-songwriter as looking like.”

Yet soon, that eye patch would become a confident signature style.

In June 1993 her debut single ‘Dreams’ entered the charts at number two, then the highest charting debut single by a British female solo act, before going on to number one.

But her private life took a turn. Her then-partner Tony Antoniou left her the day after the birth of their son Jordan. And within months of the break-up he had murdered his stepfather. In 1995 he received a life sentence for the crime.

Yet Gabrielle rose above the events. A series of platinum albums followed, including the aptly titled ‘Rise’, while career highlights also included a 1996 duet with East 17 (‘If I Ever Fall In Love’), and a song on the Bridget Jones’s Diary soundtrack (‘Out Of Reach’).

And Gabrielle’s most memorable moment from those heady days? Winning her Brit Awards.

“I’ve got two,” she grins triumphantly, “and while they’re simple things, they mean a lot to someone like me who wasn’t conventional looking, because of all the teasing at school.”

She also won an Ivor Novello award for her song-writing. But following her fifth album, ‘Always’, Gabrielle took some time out to look after her family, only returning for a tour to celebrate the 20th anniversary of the release of ‘Dreams’.

“I was ‘Gabi’s Cabbies’ for a while to my children, doing the school run,” she laughs. “I had to keep saying to them, ‘I’m not Gabi – I’m mummy!’”

After a while, Gabrielle missed performing. She

Dreams can come true

Singer Gabrielle was born and raised in Hackney before embarking on a successful music career says: “I had the touring blues... I didn’t realise how much I’d miss it.”

Last year she signed to BMG, recording her first studio album for 11 years. Gabrielle says: “I was put together with producers like Steve Chrisanthou, who’d done Corrine Bailey Rae, and Ian Barter, who’d done early Amy Winehouse.

“I wasn’t that traditional looking girl that anyone could imagine would be on TV. A working class black female”

“I had a ball – and before I knew it, it was the end of the album!”

This August, ‘Under My

Skin’ was released and reached the top 10 in the UK charts.

On the cover, she wears a white camellia flower in a nod to fashion designer Gabrielle Chanel, with whom she shares a name.

“It was another creative idea to conceal my lazy eyelid,” she reveals. “It’s not your normal picture.”

Looking back over her 25 year career, she has influenced many singers, including – reportedly – Adele. Gabrielle says: “I was so chuffed and honoured – apparently she got her mum to make her an eye patch to impersonate me. We’ve got our queen of England and then we’ve got our queen of singing – and that’s Adele. She’s phenomenal.”

For others aspiring to follow in her footsteps, she advises: “Never sacrifice your artistic integrity. Be in charge, write your own songs. Just be yourself and stay true to you.”

She adds: “People will doubt you, but it’s about being brave and courageous. People told me, ‘stay in your own lane, darling, it’s not going to happen’, but nothing is off limits, especially if you put your mind to it and stay on your path.”

Gabrielle is living testimony to the fact that, in the words of her hit song, ‘dreams can come true’. In fact, she is currently in the middle of a nationwide tour with her ‘childhood crush’ Rick Astley.

“In the future, I would love to do my own arena tour,” she says. “There’s much more to come!”

So, with six studio albums under her belt, what would the multimillion selling star say to her haters now?

She cackles in delight: “I’d say, ‘keep on hating.’ They just made my success that much sweeter. Success is the best revenge.”

THE GREEN GENIE

All your green questions answered

Q: I have three children who each want to carve a pumpkin. I feel really bad throwing this all away. I could try to eat them but our house has fussy eaters who don't like pumpkin. What can I do?

A: Food waste is scary, and it's not helped by the fact the UK throws away 18,000 tonnes of pumpkin every year. You can help by making sure you put all your food waste in your blue bin so it's recycled.

You can also turn the bit of pumpkin you scoop out into a nice warming soup; with a dash of cumin it is perfect for the cold weather. If you have fussy eaters who don't like pumpkin, then why not try and carve something different like a pineapple? The sweet insides can be eaten right away or blitzed in the blender with other fruits to make a healthy smoothie.

Parklet spaces have proved popular with Hackney's residents

Parklets shortlisted for people's award

THE Council's 'parklets' scheme has made the shortlist for a prestigious award.

The community-led initiative is one of six nominees for the Transport Planning Society's inaugural People's Award, which will recognise the planning initiatives making a positive impact in their local area.

Cllr Feryal Demirci, Deputy Mayor, said: "We are so proud that Hackney is a finalist for this first People's Award. We owe

"We owe this recognition to our residents whose support and creativity made it so popular"

this recognition to our residents whose support and creativity made it so popular and breathed life and personality in our streets."

Hackney pioneered parklets in redundant road spaces as a sanctuary for people to sit, hang out and relax following a campaign by resident Brenda Puech, supported by the Hackney and London Living Streets groups.

In July, the Council launched a scheme for individuals and communities to apply and manage a parklet in place of a car parking space, with £150 of grant funding for those who were selected. People were encouraged to come up with their own ideas as a trial to reclaim the borough's roads from cars.

The scheme has proved so popular that another round of applications is set to launch next year.

The People's Award winner will be announced on 13 November.

Speaker joins in the clean up day for Clapton

THE streets of Clapton sparkled as residents, councillors and school children gave the neighbourhood a spring (or should that be autumn?) clean.

The Clean up Clapton day saw The Speaker of Hackney, Cllr

Clare Potter, help local school children to pick up litter, before the pupils created masterpieces for submission to the annual art competition. Members of the Met's Safer Neighbourhoods team provided information on community safety, while Nicky Wilson, of the Nightingale Regeneration Project, created an exhibition describing the estate's regeneration.

The day ended with an event in the BSix College lecture theatre, where students debated with a panel, covering environmental issues.

The Speaker, Cllr Clare Potter, joined Cllr Michael Desmond, local school pupils and members of the Met's Safer Neighbourhoods team for the Clean Up Clapton day

LOVE hedgehogs? We do too. Sad news is that the number of London hedgehogs are rapidly diminishing, and Hedgefest is shining a light on their vulnerable population with a benefits music festival. Held at the Sebright Arms pub, Haggerston, the all-day festivities include live music, poetry readings, storytelling, face painting, and merriment to raise awareness, and educate people on how they can help to stop this rapid decline. Expect to hear music from pop band Blueprint Blue, electro sounds from musician Elizabete Balcus, plus more. Proceeds from the festival will go to funding the hedgehog highway, a joint project between the People's Trust for endangered species and the British Hedgehog

Moot Moot

Until 10 Nov, The Yard Theatre, Unit 2A, Queen's Yard, White Post Lane, E9 5EN

DUE to overwhelming audience demand, the hilarious two-man theatre performance once again comes to Hackney Wick. Performing arts double-act, Rosana Cade and Eilidh MacAskill (pictured) take on the roles of bizarre identical radio hosts, Barry and Barry. Batting banter back and forth, they're desperate to reach someone, anyone, to be on their show – in an exploration of the struggle to communicate. Performing as a duo for three years, see the creators desperately grasp at meaning in a post-truth world, where all facts are moot (debatable).

Don't miss the last few performances of this 'hilariously surreal' and 'desperately heart-breaking' theatre take on modern day communication.

Fringe! Queer Film & Arts Fest

13-18 Nov, various locations

IT'S now six years since the first Fringe! Queer Film & Arts Fest welcomed a small but diverse audience to a carefully curated list of films, arts and events that celebrated LGBTQ+ stories.

Since then, it's grown exponentially and this year's festival, taking place across multiple east London venues, promises to be better than ever.

Kicking things off is a screening of 'When the Beat Drops' at the Rio on 13 November. This documentary follows a group of black gay men leading double lives in the American city of Atlanta.

Professionals by day, they come together by night to dance in the underground, athletic-style known as bucking. For the rest of the week, cinemas, art galleries, pop-up venues and basement clubs will play host to the powerful, provocative and strange. A lot of the screenings and events remain free or affordable, and the festival stays true to its original identity: 'queer, celebratory but critical as hell'.

Fringe! Queer Film & Arts Fest runs from 13 - 18 November. For more information visit: www.fringeilmfest.com

East end at its best

EAST ends in the classroom met 'EastEnders' last month, when soap actor Richard Blackwood visited students at New City College (NCC).

Blackwood, who played Vincent Hubbard in the long-running BBC drama, was a surprise guest at the college's annual student achievement awards.

The awards brought together students from three of the college's campuses located in Hackney, Tower Hamlets and Redbridge.

Presenting awards to 28 high achievers, Blackwood said: "I've been really impressed by tonight's award winners. There have been some amazing personal stories of overcoming the odds."

"Events like this give the students a taste of success and show them they are on the right path and by working hard there can be more rewards for them later on in their lives.”

One such student was Anas Murdi Mohammed Al-Humsi, who won the Adult ESOL Student of the Year award.

When his family were killed in the war in Syria, he travelled alone to the UK, where he enrolled in the college's ESOL programme.

Bernadina Dos Santos, won the Creative Arts and Fashion Student of the Year award.

A single mother, her daily routine means she leaves the house at 4am every morning for work, returning home for the school run, and then leaving again for college.

The award ceremony's audience also heard speeches from former students of the college including Nazia Begum, who is studying architecture at the University of East London, and Naim Faisel, who is studying for a master's at the London School of Economics.

Event highlights languages

FIGURES from sport, the British Council and the Bank of England joined forces last month to persuade Hackney teens to study languages.

One hundred and fifty Key Stage 4 students convened at Clapton Girls' Academy on 17 October for a day of inspiring talks. Designed to show young teens how languages can boost their career options and enhance their lives, the event included a talk from Jonathan Smith, an economist at the Bank of England.

Smith gave the pupils, from Clapton Girls', Cardinal Pole, Skinners' Academy and Hackney New School three reasons to study languages. He said: "It broadens your mind and gives you chances to travel and communicate; it helps you to advance in your working and personal life; and it ensures that you will earn more money than you would without language skills."

Another speaker, Steve Eadon, revealed that he only took an A-level in German because his mum nagged him. Now he is able to combine his passions of football and languages by working at Arsenal Double Club, an educational programme run by the football club to promote football and languages jointly. The students left with information and goodies from the Spanish Embassy Education Department, the French Institute, the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, the British Council and Westminster University.

Simon Marks celebrates Democracy Day

SIMON Marks Jewish Primary School took to the polls to vote for this year's School Council.

Students voted for who they wanted to represent their class and pupils wrote manifestos with the help of guests Mayor of Hackney, Philip Glanville; The Speaker of Hackney, Cllr Clare Potter, and Cllr Sam Pallis, who announced the winners.

Mayor Glanville said: "It's been wonderful to see all the candidates as well as the entire school community fizzing with ideas."

"What shines through is the warm ethos of diversity and inclusion within the school which plays a large part in Hackney life."

Head teacher, Ms Gulcan Metin Asdoyuran, added: "It was an absolute pleasure to have the Mayor and other members of the Council in our school. They helped to bring democracy to life for our pupils who were really excited at the opportunity to ask questions and find out first-hand what democracy in action, in Hackney, looks and feels like."

The first project for the new Student Council will be a visit to Parliament.

Little things can change a foster child's life

Hackney currently needs more people to become foster carers for Jewish children coming into care.

Placements may be short term; two days to two years, or until the child is 18. There are also occasions when other permanency options are required. Additionally, we need carers that may be able to provide regular respite to help support local families.

Become a foster carer for Hackney and you'll benefit from:

- Dedicated support
- Generous allowances
- Extensive training opportunities
- Support from Ezer Leyoldos

YOUNG people across Hackney voted to decide who should be elected to represent them on the Hackney Youth Parliament.

Following weeks of preparation, finalising their manifestos and campaigning around the borough, 20 young people aged 11-19 were elected, following voting in schools and youth hubs across the borough.

Over 12,000 votes were counted by the Council's Electoral Services Team and the successful candidates were announced and welcomed into office by the Mayor of Hackney, Philip Glanville, on 19 October.

As the new representatives of young people in the borough, the Parliament will meet every week, and also have regular meetings with the Mayor, Deputy Mayor and councillors.

Cllr Anntoinette Bramble, Deputy Mayor of Hackney, said: "I am so proud to see just how many of our young residents are politically engaged, and I know that the newly elected Youth Parliament will be working hard to ensure the voice of young people in Hackney is heard."

"The Mayor and I look forward to our first meeting with them, and we are both excited to hear their plans for positive change over the next two years."

Throughout their first few months in office members will be finalising what areas they are going to focus on, using the results from The Hackney Young People's Survey and their own research and focus groups.

Beverley Tetteh, 18, new Hackney Youth Parliament member, said: "One of the main reasons I wanted to join Hackney Youth Parliament is because I want to help eliminate the negative stereotypes surrounding young people in Hackney."

"I am so excited and overwhelmed to have been elected amongst so many amazing young people."

Fionnuala nets coaching spot

A LOCAL woman has been shortlisted for a national award in recognition of her tireless work to help young sports people.

Fionnuala Duhaney-Keown, pictured right, was revealed as a finalist in the 2018 UK Coaching Awards on 22 October. Fionnuala, who has also been shortlisted for the 2018 Children's Coach of the Year Award, is head basketball coach with charity Greenhouse Sports. She also runs the basketball programme at Clapton Girls' Academy, and judges singled out her efforts to mentor her players, in sessions before and after school. Emma Atkins, director of coaching at UK Coaching, the award organisers, said: "The UK Coaching Awards is our chance to formalise our recognition, congratulations and thanks to coaches for all their hard work."

Teens top table tennis event

TWO Hackney teens batted their way to top honours in a London-wide table tennis tournament. Victoria Boakye and Tyeisha Coley triumphed at the Youth Club Table Tennis Festival at the Morpeth Table Tennis Club in Tower Hamlets, on 23 October.

Victoria, 12, a student at Mossbourne Victoria Park Academy, won the Mixed U-14 event. Tyeisha, 11, a member of Stoke Newington Youth Club, beat Victoria's sister Phoebe in the final of the Girls U-12 event, before going on to beat her own brother in the round robin section and triumph in the Mixed U-12 event. She said: "I like winning but need to improve so I can keep beating my brother."

The tournament was organised by London Youth, Table Tennis England and the Jack Petchey Foundation.

Hackney's cricket finalists are super

A YOUNG team of local cricketers made it all the way to Lord's last month, losing out to Hillingdon in a nail-biting finale.

Launched in 2013, the Lord's Taverners Super 1s programme gives young people with disabilities the chance to play cricket regularly, and take part in a year-round competition structure that culminates in a final at the world-famous Lord's cricket ground.

Hackney was one of eight teams to qualify for the finals this year, held on 18 October.

The team were promoted from a group stage featuring Sutton, Hillingdon and Newham, progressed past Kingston in the semi-finals but were edged out by Hillingdon in the final, by just four runs.

The team's coach, Gary Horsman, said: "We've played well today... It's about more than just playing cricket. Super 1s is about personal development."

Hackney players Richard Barnes and Terrance Frank were named the Super 1s fielder of the finals and bowler of the finals respectively.

Richard said: "We've done the best that we could today. Me and the whole team just love to play."

High five for new centre

A NEW day centre offering activities and facilities for people with complex needs, who need additional support, has opened in the borough.

The Oswald Street centre, E5, was officially opened on 30 October by the Mayor of Hackney, Philip Glanville, and Deputy Mayor, Cllr Feryal Demirci.

The state-of-the-art facility, laid out over two floors, brings all existing day centre services together under one roof.

It will be used by people with dementia, learning disabilities, physical disabilities and autism.

The centre will also offer a programme of activities

“Oswald Street will be a real hub in the local community and will support people with the most complex needs” to support people who use the service to remain as independent as possible.

It includes a sensory garden, which was co-designed with people who use the service, their families and partner organisations.

Mayor Glanville said: “The opening of Oswald Street is another milestone in realising our vision to provide the best facilities to some of our most vulnerable residents in Hackney.

“This is a major investment in day centre services by the Council at a time of unprecedented cuts to local government funding.

“We’re committed to delivering high-quality innovative services focused not just on those who need this care, but also the staff, carers and others who directly support them.

Still time to apply for funds for health and wellbeing projects

HALF-a-million pounds is still available to organisations aimed at improving health and wellbeing in the borough. The Healthier City and Hackney Fund, created by the Council and City and Hackney CCG, is thought to be the biggest of its kind in the country.

Organisations can secure up to £60,000 for a project for 2019/20. Applications for funding must focus on local health issues and/or inequalities and will fall into three areas: ‘healthy activities’, ‘healthy ideas’ and ‘healthy next generation’.

There is a two-stage application for groups or organisations wishing to get funding for a ‘healthy activities’ and/or ‘healthy ideas project’.

Applicants will first need to submit an expression of interest by 16 November and be invited to pitch their ideas between 10-12 December, before submitting a final bid for funding by 15 January next year.

Groups or organisations wishing to get funding for a ‘healthy next generation’ project can submit one application by 7 December

Event showcases services to help people stay fit and healthy

A FREE event to encourage people to get fit and healthy is set to take place at the Pembury Community Centre, Dalston, on 15 November.

As part of national Self Care Week, which takes place from 12 to 18 November, City and Hackney residents are being invited to learn how to take better care of themselves.

The event will include a variety of information stalls and activities, including demos on how to cook a healthy meal on a budget, chair yoga, the smoothie bike, head and shoulder massages, and fruit and vegetable giveaways. Healthcare staff will be on-hand to give blood pressure checks and medicine advice. Residents will also be able to share their thoughts on plans for local health and social care services.

The Staying Healthy event is hosted by City and Hackney CCG, NHS Community Voice and Peabody Trust. It takes place from 10.30am to 2.30pm.

For more information about the event, call the City and Hackney CCG on: 020 3816 3222.

Help tackle antibiotic resistance by taking healthcare advice

CITY and Hackney residents are being urged to take their healthcare professionals’ advice on antibiotics to help prevent antibiotic resistance.

Antibiotics are essential to treat serious bacterial infections, but they are frequently being used to treat illnesses such as coughs that can get better by themselves. Taking antibiotics, when there is no need to do so, encourages harmful bacteria that live inside the body to become resistant.

That means antibiotics may no longer work when they are actually needed.

Public Health England’s ‘Keep Antibiotics Working’ campaign is taking the lead in raising awareness.

Professor Paul Cosford, medical director, Public Health England, said: “We need to preserve antibiotics for when we really need them and we are calling on the public to join us in tackling antibiotic resistance by listening to your GP, pharmacist or nurse’s advice and only taking antibiotics when necessary.”

A healthy eating programme from Shoreditch Trust
www.shoreditchtrust.org.uk

SHOREDITCH Trust's Food for Life programme works with members of the community to encourage affordable healthy eating, cooking skills and food knowledge.

Butternut squash is in season during the autumn and winter. It comes from the same family as the pumpkin and can be used interchangeably with pumpkin in many recipes. It is a good source of fibre to keep you feeling full and also contains carotenes and vitamin C. The seeds of the squash are edible, so if you like you can roast these and add to the recipe.

This late-autumn dish, which can be eaten on its own or with baked fish or meat, is quick and easy to cook and can be reheated for a warming lunch.

Butternut squash tray bake

Makes 2-4 servings

Preparation time
15 mins

Cooking time
20-30 mins

Ingredients

- 1 medium butternut squash
- 150g grain of your choice (bulgur wheat, buckwheat, wholegrain rice etc)
- 2 red onions (peeled and cut into chunks)
- 1 red pepper (in wedges)
- 4 cloves of garlic (roasted)
- 2 tbsps of sunflower or pumpkin seeds
- Handful of baby spinach or other greens
- 1 tsp fresh thyme leaves or spices of your choice (cumin, coriander or chilli would all be delicious)
- Optional: a tin of chickpeas or any other pulses of your choice (ie kidney beans, black beans)
- 3 tbsps of olive oil
- 2 tbsps of clear honey
- Ground black pepper

Method

- Preheat the oven to 220°C / gas mark 7
- Wash the butternut squash (you can peel if you want but there is more fibre if you don't) and slice into even sized chunks, along with the red pepper and red onion
- Place onto a baking tray lined with greaseproof paper and drizzle with a little oil. Season with ground black pepper
- On the same tray, place the whole cloves of garlic, or if you are doubling this recipe, a whole bulb of garlic
- Roast for 20 minutes, until squash has softened. Remove from the oven, set aside the garlic cloves and scatter the sunflower, pumpkin seeds and the tinned chickpeas (if using) over the top and return to the oven for a further 5 minutes or until toasted
- While the ingredients are roasting, prepare the dressing. Combine honey and olive oil in a bowl, whisk and set aside. The garlic cloves should be soft and 'squidgy', so squash them gently into the dressing and whisk well
- Tear the spinach or other greens, add to a big bowl and mix with the roasted ingredients. Add the dressing and serve

Have your say on the proposed restoration of Abney Park

THE Council is developing a proposal for the restoration of Abney Park, which will include the building of a new cafe at the Stoke Newington High Street entrance to the park.

The Council would like to hear from residents about whether or not they currently use the park and whether they would like to see a cafe – and if so, what kind of cafe – there. This information will help the Council put together a fundraising bid to the Heritage Lottery Fund and Big Lottery Funded Parks for the People programme.

The consultation closes on 30 November.

Family portraits

THESE portraits, capturing the diversity of the borough's communities, were all taken in 1977 by Gibson's studio in Clapton.

They feature just a few of the thousands of people who had their photos taken at the studio in the 1970s, and whose photographs are now held at Hackney Archives as part of the RA Gibson Studio collection.

The studio's work in the 1950s and 1960s mainly involved wedding photography with a significant amount of commercial work, capturing company parties and presentations, as well as scenes from around Hackney. There are few portraits in the collection from this period.

By the 1970s, studio portraits and weddings formed almost the entirety of the work done by the studio.

Hackney Archives is carrying out a two-year project to digitise images from Gibson's studio so that they can be shared with local people at events around the borough and online. A key part of the project involves interviewing people who appear in the photographs so that their stories can be preserved as part of the history of Hackney.

More photos are on display at Hackney Museum and at flickr.com/photos/hackney_archives

The Mayor and councillors

Councillors are elected by residents and serve for four years. The last borough-wide elections took place in May 2018. Councillors have a range of responsibilities, including helping to oversee Council services.

They hold advice surgeries where residents can meet their local representative and ask them to take up issues of concern. Generally they can help with Council related matters, but if the issue is the responsibility of another person or organisation, councillors can often point people in the right direction and tell residents who they need to see.

Hackney has 57 councillors representing areas called wards – see map below.

MAYOR PHILIP GLANVILLE

Hackney's executive Mayor Philip Glanville was directly elected by the borough in 2018. He is the political leader of the Council, overseeing the budget and all Council services. The Mayor holds monthly casework surgeries in the Town Hall. To book an appointment, e-mail: mayor@hackney.gov.uk; or call: 020 8356 2212. Residents are first encouraged to contact their ward councillor. Civic and ceremonial duties are undertaken by the Speaker of Hackney, who is chosen annually from the borough's 57 councillors. The current Speaker is Cllr Clare Potter.
